

Indiana Region Raises Money for Autism Walk

On April 23, 2010 the employees and students of the entire Western Region of New Story held a bake sale on Philadelphia Street in Indiana, PA to raise money for autism. The employees and students donated their time, money and talent of baking and raised $705.00. Students from the Indiana school participated in the event not only by baking dozens of cookies, but also manning the bake goods table, working with customers, and handling the money. The students were a huge reason the bake sale was a success; they were able to practice some of their customer service skills in this community based learning experience, while having a good time! Employees from the administrative team of New Story, including Laura Vossen, Kim Schloder, Stephanie Freno, Heather Fairman, and Joyce Mowery were instrumental in everything from preparing the day events, baking goodies, making plant arrangements to sell, marketing the event and helping customers.

Karrie Miller, the Education Director for the Indiana New Story School made a special visit in a Flower costume in order to entice people to stop and get a treat! The New Story team thanks all of their customers in the area who stopped by to support autism, look for us again next year during Autism Awareness month in April!!!!
